

Individual responsibility, honesty, integrity, and confidence are among the traits that can help a young person on the road to success.

Golf not only teaches positive life lessons, but it depends on them for its very existence. It is a game where there are no officials to call a breach of the rules, that role lies with the player.

It is a game where only the individual participants know if the score they handed in is actually the score they shot. It is also a game where the raw beginner can play a competitive match with the most seasoned expert. It is a game where life-long friendships can be made.
