

WESTERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY
College of Fine Arts and Communication
& School of Music

present a

FACULTY & GUEST RECITAL
“In a Woman’s Voice:
Musical Readings by Women Composers” featuring

DUO RED VESPA

Marian Kimber Wilson, reciter

Natalie Landowski, piano

Saturday, October 30, 2021
5:00 PM

---

THE COLLEGE OF FINE ARTS AND COMMUNICATION PROUDLY
CELEBRATES OVER 50 YEARS AT WESTERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

College of Fine Arts and Communication Recital Hall

W | Western Illinois
University

PROGRAM

“In a Woman’s Voice: Musical Readings by Women Composers”

Introduction	Marian Wilson Kimber
Dame Fashion (1924)	Frieda Peycke (1884-1964)
Apples (1921)	Phyllis Fergus (1887-1964)
If Only We Could (1943)	Frieda Peycke
A Summer Idyll (1925)	Phyllis Fergus
I Doubt It (1923)	Lalla Ryckoff (b. 1891)
Wishful Waiting (c. 1947)	Frieda Peycke
Ain’t It Fine Today (1920)	Phyllis Fergus
Lie Awake Song (1922)	Phyllis Fergus
Lost Illusions (1932)	Frieda Peycke

BRIEF INTERMISSION

Upon a Broken World (2019-2020)	Lisa Neher (b. 1985)
September, 1918 (Amy Lowell)
Good Bones (Maggie Smith)
Small Kindnesses (Danusha Laméris)
Two Uses for a Fan
Excerpt from The Red Fan (1893)	Nettie Arthur Brown (1864-1914)
A Lesson with the Fan (1898)	Guy d’Hardelot (1858-1936)
The Canoe (1916)	Phyllis Fergus
Husbands (1942)	Frieda Peycke
The Usual Way (1914)	Phyllis Fergus

BIOGRAPHIES

Marian Wilson Kimber, Professor of Musicology at the University of Iowa, is the author of numerous articles and book chapters about the composers Felix Mendelssohn and Fanny Mendelssohn Hensel, and women's roles in American musical life. She was the keynote speaker at Seoul University for the 200th anniversary of Mendelssohn's birth and gave the Master Teacher Lecture for the American Musicological Society in 2011. Her book, The Elocutionists: Women, Music, and the Spoken Word (University of Illinois Press, 2017), received the Society for American Music's H. Earle Johnson Publication Subvention, as well as a subvention from the American Musicological Society. In collaboration with Natalie Landowski, Wilson Kimber has performed the compositions she explores in her book across Iowa and in Kansas City, Boston, Washington, DC, and as the William A. Hammond Lecture on the American Tradition at The Ohio State University.

Natalie Landowski joined the faculty of Western Illinois University in 2019; she previously taught at Grand View University. Landowski holds the B.M. (Univ. of California, Irvine), M.M. (Univ. of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana), and D.M.A. (Univ. of Iowa) degrees. At Iowa, she studied piano with Ksenia Nosikova and piano pedagogy with Alan Huckleberry. Landowski has performed in master classes by Gary Graffman, Menahem Pressler, and Kenneth Drake, and was a finalist in the 2008 and 2015 International Schlern Piano Competitions. Landowski was president of Illinois' MTNA Collegiate Chapter and recipient of the Illinois Center for Teaching Excellence's Certificate. She taught a full piano studio at West Music in Coralville for four years, and her students placed in and won Iowa Music Teachers' Association district and state auditions. Landowski has served on the piano faculty of the University of Iowa's Pre-College Piano Conservatory and Piano Youth festivals, and the Illinois Summer Youth Music festival. She has presented lecture recitals, pedagogy workshops, and master classes in Georgia, Nevada, Oregon, California, and Illinois.

PROGRAM NOTES

The genre of "musical readings" arose following the widespread popularity of spoken-word performance by American women in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. Young women filled the elocution schools that opened in major cities during this period. Elocutionists were regularly featured on concerts, sometimes reciting to music in informal, unnotated arrangements. Because women dominated elocution, they also became the primary composers of published pieces for spoken word and piano.

Most composers of musical readings are not well known. Nettie Arthur Brown composed very little, yet her The Red Fan, an early example of the genre, was performed in the chamber music room of Carnegie Hall in 1896. Lalla Ryckoff, who also published works for children, was active in women's clubs and lived in Milwaukee, Kansas City, and southern California.

Frieda Peycke was a prolific composer of at least 340 musical readings, a fourth of which were published. Peycke recorded nineteen of her pieces, but only one was released commercially. She spent her career performing for civic groups in Los Angeles and could reportedly hold an audience spellbound. Peycke's earliest appearances date from 1909, and her last was fifty years later in 1959, when she was seventy-five years old.

Phyllis Fergus composed sixty spoken word pieces, which she called “story poems.” Fergus sometimes appeared with Beatrice Welles reciting; she also taught piano lessons to Welles’s son, Orson, later the famous movie director. Fergus was very active in Chicago’s women’s clubs, and in the 1930s she organized two women composers’ concerts at the White House for First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. For an encore, Fergus sometimes spoke the song, A Lesson with the Fan, by Guy d’Hardelot, playing accompaniment with her left hand and wielding a fan in her right. Fergus’s most popular piece, The Usual Way, was frequently heard at bridal showers, from 1924 in Ardmore, Oklahoma, to as late as 1976 in Milton, Iowa.

Settings of three serious poems by American women, Upon a Broken World was composed for Red Vespa by Portland composer and singer Lisa Neher. The final words of Amy Lowell’s September, 1918, published after World War I, gives the set its title. Maggie Smith’s poem Good Bones became an internet sensation in 2016, shared by millions. Danusha Laméris wrote Small Kindnesses to provide solace in 2017, “when the world seemed to be imploding a bit, the country fractured in new (and old) ways.” Neher’s sensitive settings of the three women’s voices reveal that the musical reading remains a viable genre in the twenty-first century.

- Marian Wilson Kimber

Guests are required to wear a mask at all times in the COFAC Recital Hall auditorium and lobby.

Ushering services provided by the Western Illinois University Chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon.